FOR NATIONAL SECURITY—

U. S. Naval Academy

BY VICE ADM. H. W. HILL, USN
Superintendent

"It is by no means enough that an officer of the Navy should be a capable mariner. He must be that, of course, but also a great deal more. He should be, as well, a gentleman of liberal education, refined manner, punctilious courtesy and the nicest sense of personal honor."

Never have these words of John Paul Jones been more meaningful than in our world today. The Naval Academy's paramount role is to develop and provide the foundation for a future in the Naval Service. During this first week end of October hundreds of its Alumni have returned to Annapolis for their first gathering since before the War. It is our sincere hope that through annual reunion of classmates and friends the Naval Academy's Alumni will be bound ever more firmly to the purposes and aims of the Naval Academy in fulfilling its mission to the Naval Service. The statement of that mission has a prominent place in all that we do at Annapolis. It is well that it be restated here:

"Through study and practical instruction to provide the midshipmen with a basic education and knowledge of the naval profession; to develop them morally, mentally, and physically; and by precept and example to indoctrinate them with the highest ideals of duty, honor, and loyalty; in order that the Naval Service may be provided with graduates who are capable junior officers in whom have been developed the capacity and foundation for future development in mind and character leading toward a readiness to assume the highest responsibilities of citizenship and government."

It is highly important that a naval officer acquire the ability to think scientifically. This does not mean just a developed aptitude for chemistry, physics, or electronics. It means the ability to make the scientific approach, the capacity for casting a discerning eye upon data, the development of the instinct for breaking down problems into their elements in order to analyze them and effect their logical solutions. The Naval Academy provides a scientific-engineering background which places emphasis on basic principles, on awareness of relationships, the integration of knowledge, and logical thought founded upon facts. Launch Restudy of OSD Medical Office

The Department of Defense Management Committee, under the chairmanship of General Joseph T. McNarney, USAF, has undertaken a study of the functions of the Office of Medical Services.

When the Management Committee met yesterday it had on its agenda an item concerning a statement of functions of the Office of Medical Services and it is understood that Dr. Richard L. Meiling, Director of Medical Services, was asked to sit in on the meeting.

This development may have particular significance in light of the fact that the House Committee on Armed Services had announced that Dr. Meiling would appear before it for questioning on 4 Oct. However, the Medical Director did not appear and no explanation was given as to why this phase of the Committee's inquiry was not pursued.

In response to an inquiry from THE JOURNAL, a Department of Defense spokesman said this week that Dr. Meiling's status has not changed. It is understood that the Medical Director did not submit a pro forma resignation to the new Secretary of Defense as did many other officials, but that he wants to discuss his problems with General of the Army George C. Marshall first.

Meanwhile, in an address 5 Oct. before the Association of American Physicians and Surgeons meeting at Houston, Tex., Dr. Meiling stated that Service medical leaders had gotten away from "fundamentals" in the post-war period and implied that medical preparedness might have been "jeopardized." He related the steps he had taken since he took office. In his address he said:

"Future requirements for physicians will be geared to the future size of our Armed Forces, a figure which cannot be accurately predicted at present. Let us briefly look at the medical and health organization which now operates within the Department of Defense, that you, the civilian medical profession, may better understand your responsibilities in today's situation."

"The National Security Act of 1947 and its amendments, as well as the whole unification concept within the Armed Forces, naturally had its impact upon the military medical services. A number of groups conducted studies to determine the best method of providing effective medical support for the fighting forces.

"In November, 1948, the Hon. James Forrestal, then Secretary of Defense, appointed the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee. This Committee is composed of distinguished civilian leaders of the medical and dental professions, who advise the Secretary of Defense on medical and health problems. Two of Houston's favorite sons, Dr. Michael DeBakey and Dr. Walter Scherer, are members of this Committee. The work of the Committee has demonstrated time and again that it is vitally important for the civilian professions to continually review the work of the military medical services. This concept is one which you, the civilian medical profession, must maintain and foster, not only in military medical affairs, but in the broadest aspects of national defense."

AF Lt. Col. Promotions

The selection board, convened on 18 Sept., to select Air Force officers for permanent promotion to the rank of lieutenant colonel has completed its work, and the list is expected to reach the President momentarily—possibly over this weekend.

The names will not be released prior to approval by the President. Since Congress is not now in session, the appointments will be made in recess status until the Senate can confirm the nominations after reconvening late next month.

A total of approximately 2500 permanent majors on the various promotion lists were eligible for consideration. On the USAF promotion list the "best qualified" method of selection was used.

Plans for U. S. Fleet

Plans for future unbuilding of the United States Fleet, including the laying down of a flush-deck carrier, were outlined to the House Committee on Armed Services this week by Admiral Forrest Sherman, USN, Chief of Naval Operations.

The hearing was one of a series being conducted by the Committee. Because so many had gone home for the recess, Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), chairman, was the only member present. Other witnesses in addition to Admiral Sherman were Vice Adm. J. W. Rorer, Chief of Naval Personnel, and Rear Adm. C. A. Swanson, Chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery.

Questions by Chairman Vinson brought out that at present there are 9 carriers on the active list and 19 in reserve, and that with the completion of work on another one—the Essex—there will be 10 large carriers active by the end of fiscal 1951, and that 2 others are under modernization transformation.

As to other combatant ships, Admiral Sherman stated that 62 have been taken from the moth-ball fleet and activated since 25 June. Constituting the number were 2 large carriers, 3 escort carriers, 2 destroyer escorts, 13 destroyers, 30 amphibian ships, and 12 auxiliaries.

According to Admiral Sherman, work has been started on 296 other vessels in the moth-ball fleet, including one light carrier, 2 escort carriers, 1 battleship, 2 cruisers, 164 amphibian ships, all of which will be activated by 30 June 1951.

The Chief of Naval Operations stated that the objective of the Navy is to develop a long-range replacement program, the present target being a Fleet of 20 carriers, 2 battleships, 15 cruisers, 200 destroyers, 75 submarines, 118 mine destroyers, 256 amphibian ships, 255 auxiliaries, and total aircraft of 7,334.

Asked by Chairman Vinson about a possible future carrier program of the Navy, Admiral Sherman stated that the 12 referred to must be supplemented by a longer range program, to determine what type should be constructed, faster and heavier rather than larger than present flat-tops, and with armored decks,

Taxes Hiked, Hazard Duty Pay Considered

As hopes for Congressional enactment of legislation to provide hazard duty pay for ground troops in action against the enemy were raised this week, higher income tax deductions for most Armed Forces personnel went into effect on 1 Oct.

The only military personnel who will not pay higher income taxes at a time when living costs for members of the Armed Forces are rising out of proportion to those of the civilian population are the men of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps in the Korean combat zone.

The President has yet to issue the Executive Order prescribing the specific combat zone and implementing legislation which authorizes a $200 monthly income for officers in the combat area and a blanket exemption for enlisted men in Korea.

As THE JOURNAL has pointed out repeatedly, the legislation, hastily passed during the final weeks before the Congressional recess, is fraught with possibility of inequities and runs counter to the long-standing tradition to provide equal benefits for all Armed Forces personnel in the matter of income tax exemption.

Meantime, at the Pentagon and, more importantly, on Capitol Hill, there is growing support for the passage of a measure to provide hazardous duty pay for ground troops of the Army and Marine Corps, who have suffered the largest losses in the Korean fighting.

That efforts to provide hazardous duty pay for ground troops would meet with Presidential approval was seen indirectly this week in the President's glowing tribute to the foot soldier, delivered in connection with the award of the Congressional Medal of Honor to Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, missing in action.

"Once again in our history despite all the wonders of modern science and the massive weight of the world's industrial population," the President said, "victory has been gained because the man standing on the ground, sleeping in the mud and fighting face to face with a ruthless and determined foe would not give up."

The President said that the free peoples of the world "and those enslaved peoples who dream of freedom give honor to these men. To those who sacrificed their lives, they erect in their hearts a monument which time cannot efface—an enduring faith in the deeds of men who are making possible a free and peaceful world."

"As President of the United States, I am privileged to voice this tribute of my profound respect and admiration for valor above and beyond the call of duty which characterized the spirit of our soldiers in those bitter early weeks of the Korean conflict. I am confident that

THE WAR IN KOREA

WITH the complete defeat of the Red Army in South Korea, the conflict this week moved into enemy territory in North Korea. While American and Allied troops methodically wiped out isolated pockets of resistance in the south, two South Korean divisions crossed the controversial 38th parallel and moved 60 miles into North Korea against light opposition.

Apparently the movement into North Korea was made on the initiative of the South Koreans, without the official sanction of General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, commander-in-chief of United Nations forces. However, the high command interposed no objection, and provided naval and air support for the drive.

The invasion of North Korea followed a radio demand by General MacArthur for the surrender of the Reds. No reply was received from the defeated Communists, who gave every indication of continuing the fight with the remnants of their army, supported by military supplies and equipment from Communist China.

An indication of the continued support of the losing North Korean cause by the Chinese Reds came with the discovery of long convoys of trucks and other vehicles moving south from the vicinity of the border city of Antung, which is on the Chinese side of the Korean-Manchurian boundary. These trucks were loaded with troops and supplies, but there was no confirmation of reports that Chinese troops may have been in the trucks.

There were indications that the troops were North Koreans who may have been trained in or near Manchuria, but the trucks and their cargoes probably came from Communist China. The truck columns were first discovered late Monday afternoon, 2 Oct., by Allied reconnaissance planes.

Darkness prevented an attack on the truck columns that day, but early next morning one long convoy was found parked off the road, north of Pyongyang, the North Korean capital. The vehicles were well camouflaged, but as soon as they were discovered they were heavily attacked by Allied planes and 85 were destroyed or damaged. Two other long columns could not be located and had apparently reached their destination.

The penetration of enemy territory by the South Koreans was along the east coast. The 3d South Korean Division, which advanced 275 road miles in 15 days, crossed the 38th parallel shortly before noon on Sunday, 1 Sept. It took the little village of Yangyang, and then pressed on to capture Kansong and Kosong, the latter 50 miles above the 38th parallel.

Farther inland the South Korean Capital Division also moved into Red territory. The two divisions met surprisingly little enemy resistance, and were warmly welcomed by the inhabitants, who were obviously tired of Communist tyranny.

Some of the relatively few North Korean prisoners taken in this advance were new soldiers, who had not previously been in battle, indicating that the Reds have some reserve units not committed in the southern battle area. The prisoners said that they had been ordered to fight a delaying action, and then fall back to the vicinity of Wonsan, an important east coast North Korean port, 100 miles north of the 38th parallel.

Lack of Resistance

The almost complete lack of enemy resistance caused some concern to Allied leaders, who feared a possible Red flank attack from the hills on the extended South Korean columns. However, reconnaissance planes and ground patrols were unable to locate any considerable Communist force in the immediate area of the advance.

North of Seoul troops of the American 1st Marine Division captured the town of Uijongbu, after a brisk fight. At this point Red troops which had retreated from Seoul made a strong rear guard stand to facilitate the withdrawal of other Communist formations into North Korea. The South Korean II Corps advancing from the south effected a junction with the American X Corps east of Seoul.

Late this week no American ground troops had crossed into North Korea. Apparently General MacArthur was awaiting the outcome of the United Nations debate on the Korean question. The delay provided an opportunity to regroup the Allied forces, and to bring up supplies and reserves for an attack on enemy territory to complete the destruction of the Red army.

As United Nations troops were deployed north of Seoul, near the 38th parallel, preparatory to an advance into enemy territory, it was announced that the 3d Division of the United States Army, until recently stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., had arrived in the Far East. With the arrival of this division the Allied ground forces in the Far East, including the South Koreans, have reached a total probably exceeding 200,000. The 3d Division is commanded by Maj. Gen. Robert H. Soule, who has had long service in the Orient.

As Allied troops liberated South Korean towns they encountered almost everywhere horrible evidence of mass atrocities committed by the defeated Red troops. While some of the victims were Americans taken as prisoners of war, most of those massacred were South Korean civilians who were murdered by the thousands.

A South Korean official estimates that more than 10,000 civilians were murdered at Seoul, and several hundred American prisoners of war known to have been held in Seoul are unaccounted for, but may have been moved to the north. At Taejon bodies of more than 20 murdered Americans were found in a hastily-dug mass grave. These soldiers, who had been war prisoners, were bound together and slain, and some of them were buried alive, just prior to the capture of that city by United States troops. Two Americans and one South Korean, bound together and shot, were thrown into the grave alive, and were still living when our troops arrived a few hours later. Subsequently one of the two Americans died, but the other was able to tell the story of the ghastly massacre.

Slay 1,000 Civilians

In addition to the murdered Americans our troops found in Taejon the bodies of more than 1,000 recently slain South Korean civilians. They were ruthlessly murdered because they had been anti-Communists, or because they had relatives in the South Korean army.

At Mokpo South Korean marines who captured the small port found the bodies of about 500 civilians, who had been murdered by the Reds just prior to withdrawing from the town. At Chonju it is estimated that 1,000 civilians were slain in the senseless barbarity of the Communists. Bodies of murdered Koreans in lesser numbers were found at various other towns and cities, all defeated Reds. Allied leaders expressed the fear that it may be difficult to restrain the South Koreans from reprisals.

While the number of Red prisoners taken by our forces is steadily mounting, there have been no mass surrenders as a result of the proclamation of General MacArthur. A great many Red troops remain unaccounted for. Some have extricated themselves from entrapment in the south and have found their way back to North Korea. Many others are believed to be forming guerrilla bands in the mountains, where they may be able to hold out for weeks. South Koreans forced into the Red army probably have doffed their uniforms and returned home.

The Eighth Army estimates that during the last three months 75,000 North Koreans were killed or permanently disabled. The total number of Red prisoners taken has not been officially announced, but an unofficial estimate is that the total captured since the Inchon landing three weeks ago exceeds 25,000. Prior to the landing the total was comparatively small, probably less than 10,000. However, in recent days the take has been rather heavy. In one 24-hour period this week nearly 7,000 surrendered. Most of these came to our lines in relatively small groups on all sections of the front. Many dispirited Reds were surrounded and hungry.

A factor in recent captures of enemy soldiers is a particularly effective propaganda leaflet. It is a so-called "safe conduct pass" which guarantees prisoners of war humane treatment. Millions of these leaflets were dropped by planes behind enemy lines, and thousands of Red soldiers were carrying leaflets when they gave themselves up.

American battle casualties, based on notifications of the next of kin through midnight 29 Sept., were officially announced as 20,756, including 2,954 battle deaths, 13,659 wounded, 3,877 missing, 73 known to be captured or interned. Of those previously reported missing 193 returned to military control.

Seek Targets

Since the collapse of the enemy in South Korea, Allied planes have had difficulty in finding satisfactory bombing targets. Unless there is a material change in the military situation, caused by the entry of either Russia or Red China into the conflict, it is quite possible that the strategic phase of the air war may soon be ended. The big American B-29 medium bombers have knocked out practically all war factories in North Korea and may soon be withdrawn. B-29 groups sent to Korea from the United States after the war started are hopeful of returning home before Christmas. Tactical aircraft, both land-based and carrier-based, will continue to support land operations so long as they are in progress.

Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, commanding the Far East Air Force, this week summarized the achievements of his command during the first 96 days of the conflict. Gen. Stratemeyer said that in that period the planes of his force had destroyed or damaged 1,059 enemy tanks.

The heavy toll of tanks indicates that throughout the war the Reds have been able to secure tank replacements, presumably from Communist China. At the start of the war it was estimated that the North Koreans had not to exceed 300 tanks. More than three times that many are claimed to have been destroyed or damaged by the Far East Air Force. This does not include a large number knocked out by carrier-based Navy and Marine planes and by ground troops.

In addition to tanks the Far East Air Force in 96 days of combat destroyed or damaged 5,233 trucks, 330 locomotives, 874 railroad cars, 376 bridges, 52 aircraft, 43 warehouses, 22 oil storage tanks, and 33 marshalling yards. General Stratemeyer's planes also silenced 689 field guns, attacked 11,030 troops, and sealed 33 tunnels. Again, these totals do not include the damage inflicted by carrier-based aircraft, Naval gunfire and ground troops.

Strategic Bombing

Eighteen major strategic Red targets—such as industrial centers—were reported neutralized. While these facilities were prime targets the Air Force B-29 medium bombers, many of them were also struck by Navy planes.

Losses of the Far East Air Force for the period covered by General Stratemeyer's report were 139 aircraft lost, and 175 personnel casualties. Of the casualties, 52 airmen were killed, 56 wounded, 65 missing, and two known to be prisoners of war.

Enemy planes knocked out were mostly Russian-made Yak fighters, and, unlike the tanks, there were no replenishments. At the start of the war the enemy was estimated to have about 100 planes. With those destroyed by Navy and Marine flyers the losses practically wiped out the North Korean air force rather early in the conflict and replacements were not provided.

During this week Allied Naval vessels continued to support ground action along the eastern and southern coasts. Naval patrols prevented any considerable number of Reds from escaping in small craft from fishing ports in southwest Korea.

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, told the House Armed Services Committee this week that two American destroyers, the Brush and the Mansfield, were damaged by floating mines in Korean waters, and several seamen were killed or wounded. Subsequently it was announced that the American mine sweeper Magpie had been sunk by a mine off the east coast of Korea, near Pohang. Twenty-one members of the crew are missing. The others were rescued.

Many floating mines were destroyed in the area by Allied warships and other mines were recovered. They proved to be of Russian manufacture, and apparently were recently placed in the water, since they were free from barnacles and other sea growth, which would have been present had they been placed in the sea during World War II. Presumably they were recently released from disguised fishing boats, or placed in Korean streams which carried them out to sea.

The use of floating mines in warfare is prohibited by the Hague convention, which also specifies that moored mines must be so constructed as to become ineffective immediately after breaking away from their moorings.

Army Orders Helicopters

Bell Aircraft Corporation has announced receipt of a large production order for H-13D helicopters from the Army Field Forces. A company spokesman said it was the largest single quantity order for helicopters ever awarded by a branch of the military. The order was procured by the Air Force for the Army.

The Field Forces have multi-purpose plans for the H-13D. In addition to its normal uses, it can be equipped with two litters for the evacuation of wounded. The litters also allow the helicopter to carry supplies and equipment and it can be used in an assault configuration, three passengers in the cockpit and one each plus equipment in the litters, thus serving the purpose of a five-place helicopter. It can also be used as a mobile control tower, allowing communication and direction and spotting for ground forces, tanks and even support aircraft.

New Navy Course

A new course of instruction for Naval officers at the General Line School in Monterey, Calif., was initiated 2 Oct., when 20 student officers commenced instruction in a short communication course, the establishment of which was ordered by the Bureau of Naval Personnel.

Expand Marine Corps

The House Committee on Armed Services indicated this week that it will seek to enlarge the Marine Corps so that by fiscal year 1952 it will be composed of four Divisions and four Air Wings, instead of the present two Divisions and two Air Wings.

'With Maj. Gen. Merwin H. Silverthorn, Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps, as witness, the following facts were brought out by questions of the members of the committee at a meeting 4 Oct. A June 25th strength of 74,366 has changed to a 30 Sept. strength of 123,600, composed of 9,600 officers and 114,000 enlisted men, including supporting elements.

As presently constituted, the Fleet Marine Force is composed of one Division in Korea and one now being built up on the East Coast. Of the total strength, 104,700 are ground forces and 18,800 air troops. The objective of the Corps is to have 166,155 officers and enlisted personnel by the end of June 1951, making possible two combat divisions and 18 squadrons of air plus supporting elements.

General Silverthorn admitted that the Marine Corps has plans beyond that, but the fact that they are "classified" kept him from revealing details.

When the witness testified that the Marine Corps does not need the help of the draft machinery to reach the desired enlisted strength but can attain it through voluntary enlistments and from the Reserves, Chairman Vinson suggested that the Corps is securing the cream of the manpower pool and asked whether it would not be well to have one central agency to recruit for all the Services. General Silverthorn replied that the Corps would not want this as it would: (1) interfere with the morale of men desiring to choose their own branch; (2) it would affect the quality of the recruits received, 90 being the classification test of the Marines, and 70 that of Selective Service; and (3) it is unnecessary because of voluntary enlistments and accretions from the Reserves.

General Silverthorn reported that all the Organized Reserve ground troops have been alerted and 90.02 per cent have reported for active duty. All Reserve field officers, except two, have been called to active duty.

There have been no deferments in the Marine Corps on the ground of dependency, but General Silverthorn stated that there is to be a reconsideration of dependency policy.

Because there is a conflict in policies in relation to student deferment—those in the Organized Reserves being deferred for a semester only and those not in the Organized Reserves being deferred for a year—Chairman Vinson stated that his committee will attempt to effect legal uniformity in this line in all the Services.

Replying to a question as to the Marine Corps strength in Korea, General Silverthorn stated that the Fleet Marine ground troops there consisted of 24,852 officers and men, and the aviation troops 4,353 officers and men, a total of 29,702, aside from the "pipe-line" troops which would increase the total to 31,527.

When asked whether any green troops had been sent to Korea, General Silverthorn stated that all personnel there had had sufficient training, but that the overseas commanders had placed the least trained in non-combat jobs.

The battle casualties reported up to four or five days ago were: killed, 346 officers and enlisted men and 66 deaths from wounds; wounded and living, 118 officers and 1,783 enlisted men; missing, 3 officers and 27 enlisted men; a total of 150 officers and 2,207 enlisted men; in all, 2,357. Non-battle casualties were two officers and 12 enlisted men.

Asked by the chairman to indicate any lessons learned from the Korean campaign, General Silverthorn stated that one lesson reaffirmed is that it is absolutely necessary to have a Force In Being, ready for action, and an amphibious "lift"—a condition not true at the beginning of the Korean campaign, and that the amphibious landing could have been made sooner if there had been a Force In Being and ready to move.

Asked what type of Marine Force should be in being in peacetime, General Silverthorn said two full Divisions and two Air Wings, but that this number would be insufficient if used for other purposes, and that for a needed Force In Being there should be two additional Divisions and two more Air Wings, and that for a 4-Division, 4-Wing Force there would be needed 28,000 officers and 298,000 enlisted men, a total of 326,000.

To this, Chairman Vinson replied that he "and the committee would fight for this when Congress returns."

Other Korean lessons suggested by General Silverthorn were: (1) the practicability of the use of helicopters, only five of which the Marines had had there; (2) the capability of the Marines to cooperate in land warfare, that the Marines use the same technique as the Army, the same text-book, and most of the same weapons; (3) the validity of the air-ground communications concept, and amphibious landing doctrine.

Bearing on these lessons was the statement of General Silverthorn, that while the Marines are first "Marines," 85 per cent of them are trained in ground formations and must have two years of ground training.

Chairman Vinson ended the session by commanding the Marine Corps for calling the Organized Reserves to active duty and stated that "The Marine Corps lives up to what Congress expects from it."

Representative Leroy Johnson (R-Calif.), calling attention to the hearings held this week, said: "Chairman Vinson is the only person in the entire country digging out information necessary for the safety of the country and the people of the United States should know this."

Study Hazard Pay

my words reflect the feeling in the hearts of all Americans."

However, in the face of the growing realization that hazard duty pay or overseas pay of some sort should be provided for ground elements is the fact that supporters are concerned with a possible apathy on this matter should fighting come to a halt before Congress resumes action late next month.

Congressional sources emphasized to THE JOURNAL this week that hazard duty pay provisions could be sidetracked more easily if happily fighting should be terminated, but they say that efforts will be made, whatever the war situation, to remind the Nation of the great sacrifices made by ground combat elements in the months of fighting in Korea.

Also, it is understood that the sentiment among advocates of hazardous duty pay is to make these benefits retroactive to the outset of fighting and to give this token payment to survivors of Army and Marine Corps personnel killed in action.

At the same time that increased consideration is being given to the adoption of new hazardous pay legislation, renewed efforts are certain towards broadening income tax exemptions for military personnel, particularly in view of the fact that thousands of Reservists with families are being called to active duty.

Data regarding the actual and potential inequities inherent in the legislation extending the special income tax exemption only to persons in combat for the particular month or months in which they are actually in the combat zone is being compiled by authorities at the Pentagon and on Capitol Hill.

Undoubtedly, proposals will be made to amend the present law. Whether this can be achieved before the new Congress begins in January is uncertain.

As civilian workers throughout the country, in increasing numbers, are being given special pay raises to cover the added cost of living and to offset the increased tax rates, military pay remains frozen. It is obvious that members of the Armed Forces are being placed under extraordinary financial hardship.

Therefore, Congressmen who earlier expressed the belief that income tax exemptions should be provided for all military personnel—regardless of the chance of assignment—will urge immediate action to relieve an undue financial burden on men and women of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

Advertisers in the Army Navy Air Force Journal support the Armed Forces and are familiar with their requirements.

Seeks Aid For Ryukyuans

Maj. Gen. Robert B. McClure, USA, Commanding General and Military Governor of the Ryukyu Islands, has issued an appeal to women's organizations at Service installations throughout the States, for used clothing suitable for adults and children, and for English readers, picture books, etc., for first and second school grades, for distribution among the Ryukyuans.

Packages should be addressed to: The Rycom Women's Club, A.P.O. 331, c/o Postmaster, San Francisco, Calif.

Dependent Allowances

The Armed Forces are calling upon all commanders to impress upon enlisted men with families the urgency of sending dependent allowance payments to their dependents directly until allotments are put into effect.

The Army has sent the following message to its commanders on this subject:

"The Dependents' Assistance Act of 1950 (DA Circular 48, 1950) provides basic allowance for quarters for all enlisted personnel with dependents, effective 1 August 1950. The basic allowances for quarters will be credited to the enlisted member from 1 August 1950 if he is entitled thereto. The increased amount due for August and September will be paid to the enlisted member with his regular pay for the month of September.

"Under the Act mentioned above, allotments to dependents are not required prior to 1 November 1950 and checks will not be mailed until after 30 November 1950. All amounts due for basic allowances for quarters prior to 1 November 1950 will be paid to enlisted members; therefore, it is incumbent upon him personally to forward funds to his dependents from his pay and allowances by appropriate means such as postal money order, bank draft, etc., until allotments are put into effect.

"Enlisted members should be advised immediately by all means available that it is their responsibility to provide for their dependents during this initial stage.

"All disbursing officers will take immediate measures to insure that prompt and full payments are made to all enlisted members on regular pay days."

Emergency Transport Action

The Transportation - Communication Committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States on 3 Oct. announced it will ask the Chamber's Board of Directors to take emergency action on recommendations for transportation conservation, allocations of essential materials, and distribution of manpower to assure the industry's continued efficient operation.

Committee Chairman Evans A. Nash, president, Yellow Transit Co., Oklahoma City, said that since the industry is confronted with increasing government controls because of the current international situation, shippers and carriers should take voluntary action toward maximum use of all transport facilities.

"The freight car shortage is particularly serious at this time," he said. "Therefore, every effort should be made by users to load and unload cars promptly in clean condition."

The Chamber Committee, at its meeting in Washington, also:

Considered future policy on a single regulatory agency, the belief being expressed that all functions of regulatory agencies should report direct to Congress and not be under any jurisdiction of the executive branch of government:

Set up three subcommittees: Civil Aviation Policies, Prof. Sydney L. Miller, Pittsburgh, chairman; Urban Transportation Policies, Robert H. Walker, Keokuk, Iowa, chairman; and Gypsy Trucks, Charles P. Clark, St. Louis, chairman;

Agreed that states should work toward reasonable uniformity of standards for truck sizes and weights, the regulation remaining state and not federal responsibility;

Referred to the Chamber's Labor Relations Committee the subject of possible amendments to the Railroad Labor Act and referred to the Chamber's Finance Committee the subjects of deferred maintenance and excess profit's tax;

Heard ICC Commissioner James K. Knudson, Utah Republican, who is the new defense transportation administrator, speak at a luncheon on current transportation problems.

Jungle Road to Tokyo

"Our Jungle Road to Tokyo," by Lt. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, USA-Ret., 306 pages, $4.50, The Viking Press, New York City.

WHEREAS many books recapitulating segments of World War II were hurried into print, "Our Jungle Road to Tokyo," by Lt. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, USA-Ret., was prepared slowly and painstakingly over a long period.

Yet, despite the fact that it is now more than five years since the signing of the surrender on the USS Missouri—an event witnessed by General Eichelberger—the story of the ground soldier's fight from Buna to Tokyo is still timely, and General Eichelberger saw plenty of it, first as a corps commander in General Krueger's Sixth Army and, from September 1944, as commanding general of the Eighth Army.

Indeed, it is the very Eighth Army which General Eichelberger commanded so brilliantly and whose accomplishments are related here with warm expertise, which has, under Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, now brought victory within grasp on the fateful postwar extension of the road to Tokyo. Of the record of the Eighth in World War II, General of the Army Douglas MacArthur has said: "No army of this war has achieved greater glory and distinction." Its service under the U. N. will win similar acclaim.

Later, there will be a story told of the Eighth Army's fight for freedom in Korea. That story will be better understood because of General Eichelberger's distinguished book, written in collaboration with Mr. Milton MacKaye.

What the basic thread of continuity in the story of the Eighth Army's road to Tokyo—and now beyond—will be is the earthy recognition of the foot soldier.

When the atomic bomb was unleashed, experimentally at Almogordo, then frighteningly at Hiroshima and Nagasaki, the role of the foot soldier, temporarily at least, became obscured. In an atmosphere where the "mushroom cloud" became a dominant symbol, the nation forgot for the moment what had been done by the foot soldier who repeatedly, across the Pacific, had "slogged on into the jungle and wilderness." General Eichelberger's book and the fighting in Korea are concomitant reminders of what the Ground Forces did and what they are now doing.

General Eichelberger, ever the champion of the foot soldier, explains why it was necessary for him to write this saga of the foot soldier and the jungle fighting:

"I have tried to tell at first hand the story of the Ground Forces, with a natural emphasis on those troops I knew and commanded. This is not because I fail to appreciate the magnificent achievements of the greatest Navy which ever sailed an ocean, or because I fail to appreciate the gallantry and devotion to duty of land-based fighter and bomber pilots, or because I underestimate the intrepidity of our Marine Corps or the expertise of the fine youngsters who manned carrier-based planes.

"I have concentrated on the story of the ground troops because it has not been adequately told before, and because it is the story I know best."

At the present time, General Eichelberger is recuperating satisfactorily from a serious operation at Asheville, N. C. There, he is following the battle for final victory in Korea. Doubtless, he is thinking most of his beloved Ground Forces, still fighting and dying on the jungle road to freedom.

To Command First Army

Lt. Gen. Willis D. Crittentenger, USA, has been assigned to command the First Army at Governor's Island, N. Y., effective 1 Nov., succeeding Lt. Gen. Walter B. Smith, USA, who becomes head of the Central Intelligence Agency.

General Crittentenger will continue as Army representative on the military delegation of the United States mission to the United Nations. He will be relieved as chairman of the Inter-American Defense Board and as U. S. deputy representative to the standing group of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, two other posts he presently holds.

New MC Majors

The Army this week released the names of Medical Corps captains—Regular and Reserve—selected for temporary advancement to the rank of major.

A total of 124 Medical Corps captains received temporary promotions. Of this number 88 are Regulars and 36, Non-Regulares.

The promotions became effective on 14 Sept.

Yet to be released are the names of women officers selected for temporary promotion to various ranks. This list is expected to be made available by mid-October.

The criteria used in the selection of Medical Corps captains for promotion established cutoff date of rank of 18 Sept. 1948 for non-Regulars.

For Regulars, the last named officer is Number 950 on the Promotion List, Bruce D. Storrs, a permanent captain according to the official 1950 Army Register, with date of permanent rank from 1 Dec. 1949 and temporary rank as a captain from 19 May 1946. His basic date of appointment is 31 Dec. 1943. His name is the last on the list of permanent captains of the Medical Corps.

Army General Reassigned

Brig. Gen. Claude B. Ferenbaugh, Chief of Staff, Third Army, has been re-assigned by the Department of the Army to duty with the Fourth Army as Commanding General, 5th Armored Training Division at Camp Chaffee, Ark.

Pending announcement of a replacement for General Ferenbaugh, Maj. Gen. William C. Chase will act in the dual capacity of Deputy Commanding General, and as Chief of Staff, Third Army.

Prior to his assignment as Chief of Staff, Third Army, General Ferenbaugh was Commanding General, Schofield Barracks, Hawaii.

Gen. Dean Honored

As hope persisted throughout the Nation and most particularly among his wide group of friends in the Armed Forces that he would yet be found alive, Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, officially listed as missing in action, on 30 Sept. was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor by President Truman.

This marked the first award of the Nation's highest award for heroism in Korea.

General Dean was commanding general of the 24th Infantry Division and repeatedly exposed himself to danger in the battle for Taejon on 20 and 21 July. He has been missing since that action, although there have been recent reports—none confirmed—that he may be a prisoner in North Korea.

In the official citation accompanying General Dean's award, the President said:

"In command of a unit suddenly relieved from occupation duties in Japan and as yet untried in combat, faced with a ruthless and determined enemy, highly trained and overwhelmingly superior in numbers, he felt it his duty to take action which, to a man of his military experience and knowledge, was clearly apt to result in his death. "He personally and alone attacked an enemy tank while armed only with a hand grenade. He also directed the fire of his own tanks from an exposed position with neither cover nor concealment while under observed artillery and small arms fire. When the town of Taejon was finally overrun he refused to insure his own safety by leaving with the leading elements but remained behind organizing his retreating forces, directing stragglers, and was last seen assisting the wounded to a place of safety."

"These actions indicate that General Dean felt it necessary to sustain the courage and resolution of his troops by examples of excessive gallantry, committed always at the threatened portions of his front lines. The magnificent response of his unit to this willing and cheerful sacrifice, made with full knowledge of its certain cost, is history. The success of this phase of the campaign is in large measure due to General Dean's heroic leadership, courageous and loyal devotion to his men, and his complete disregard for personal safety."

Army War College Reopens

The doors of the Army War College, senior institution in the Army educational system, were officially reopened 29 Sept., following ceremonies in Grant Hall auditorium, Ft. Leavenworth, Kans.

Maj. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, Commandant of the Army War College, delivered the orientation address to the assembled student body and Brig. Gen. Arthur G. Trudeau, Deputy Commandant, spoke to the group on subjects comprising the school curriculum. Lt. Col. Harry H. Critz, Secretary, Army War College, also spoke.

Actual class work began 2 Oct., when General J. Lawton Collins, Chief of Staff, United States Army, appeared as the first honorary lecturer. General Collins spoke on classified matters relative to the present military situation and conducted a seminar following his address.

New Tactical Division

The Army this week reorganized the 4th Infantry (Training) Division, formerly at Ft. Ord, Calif., as the 11th tactical division, under command of Brig. Gen. Harlan N. Hartness at Ft. Benning, Ga.

It is recalled that for several years prior to the outbreak of fighting in Korea, the Army had insisted that its minimum needs were 12 tactical divisions.

General Hartness, who will command the 4th Infantry Division, was Acting Commandant at the Command and General Staff School until his recent relief by Maj. Gen. Horace L. McBride, formerly chief of the military mission to Turkey.

Existing tactical divisions of the Army are the 1st Infantry, 1st Cavalry (Infantry), 2d Infantry, 2d Armored, 3d Infantry, 7th Infantry, 11th Airborne, 24th Infantry, 25th Infantry, and 82d Airborne.

The 4th will be replaced at Ft. Ord as a training division by the 6th Infantry (Training) Division. Other training divisions are the 9th Infantry, Ft. Dix, N. J.; 3d Armored, Ft. Knox, Ky.; 10th Infantry, Ft. Riley, Kans.; 101st Airborne, Camp Breckinridge, Ky.; 5th Armored, Camp Chaffee, Ark.; 8th Infantry, Ft. Jackson, S. C.; and 6th Armored, Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo.

Maj. Gen. Robert T. Frederick, who has been Commanding General of the 4th Infantry (Training) Division will assume command of the 6th Infantry (Training) Division at Ft. Ord.

Brig. Gen. Thomas S. Timberman will be Assistant Division Commander of the 4th Infantry Division. General Timberman, who has been chief of the Operations Division in the office of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Operations, General Staff, U. S. Army, since Dec., 1947, will report to his new assignment at Ft. Benning, about 9 Oct.

Chaplain Chief To FEC

The Chief of Army Chaplains, Maj. Gen. Roy H. Parker left this week for the Far East where he will visit American troops in the front lines and inspect chaplain activities.

Chaplain Parker plans to discuss the world-wide implications of the United Nations campaign in Korea with as many GI's as possible. In addition to personal contacts, the Chief of Chaplains will conduct religious services and address American personnel over the armed forces radio network.

The head of the Army chaplaincy, who was Far East Command Chaplain prior to his present assignment in Washington, will return to the United States by way of San Francisco. He plans to visit Fort Ord, Camp Cooke and Sixth Army Headquarters.

Chaplain Parker is accompanied on the trip by Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James B. Murphy, Planning and Training Division.

Ft. Eustis Housing

Approval of a project for construction of 412 rental housing units for use of personnel assigned to Fort Eustis, Va., is announced by the Army.

THIS COUNTRY'S telephone service is one of its greatest assets in time of emergency. It unites millions of people — helps thousands of businesses to get things done quicker — and is a vital part of our national defense.

Since 1941, the Bell System has increased the number of telephones by more than 16,000,000. There are nearly twice as many now as nine years ago. Billions of dollars have been spent for new telephone equipment of every kind. The number of Bell Telephone employees has increased to more than 600,000.

All of this growth and the size of the Bell System are proving of particular value right now. One reason this country can outproduce any other is because it has the most and the best telephone service in the world.

with fundamental naval operational techniques and a broad knowledge of the potentialities and limitations of naval materiel are an essential part of the naval officer's factual background.

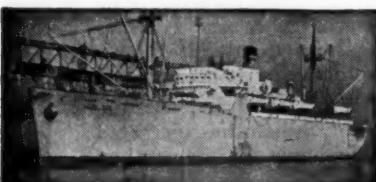

The naval officer must have the ability to recognize and analyze critically the national and international economic and social problems of our times. For example, foreign and domestic economic policies are determining considerations in naval activities. The naval officer must understand people. He must know how to exercise the responsibilities of command, how to cooperate and secure cooperation, and how to communicate ideas and ideals effectively. He must have the physical energy to accomplish his tasks.

The report of the Service Academy Board, under the chairmanship of Robert L. Stearns, president of the University of Colorado, and of which General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower was vice chairman, substantiates the policies of the Military and Naval Academies and of the proposed and highly desirable Air Force Academy. Briefly, this board reported that "The fundamental purpose of service academies is to develop officers qualified to enter upon military duties in a particular Service. At the same time the service academies should provide the undergraduate with a basic indoctrination in unification and a sound framework of fundamental knowledge of national security matters upon which he can build in the future as he progresses through the higher service schools to more responsible assignments." We recognize that we are dealing with young men and that they must have objectives appropriate to their interests and maturity levels.

Since the war considerable progress has been made toward improvement of the understanding by cadet and midshipman of the problems of their own and other Services. Favorable results are being obtained through a system of exchange visits and joint participation in service exercises and training. Cadets take part with midshipmen in amphibious exercises, midshipmen take part in summer training of cadets at Camp Buckner, near West Point, and graduates of West Point on graduation leave take part in the Midshipman Cruise. Second classmen of the Naval Academy through the medium of Air Cruises and other instruction during second class summer obtain considerable familiarity with air facilities, military and commercial, and the role of air in the military organization.

The Naval Academy today is continuing its traditional function of providing capable junior officers for the Naval Service and at the same time provides its graduates with a sound understanding of the interdependence of the Service essential in modern warfare.

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPS*Philippine Sea

The Navy carrier USS Philippine Sea has added more than 23,000 nautical miles and 3,100 sorties to her log in the two months since she left Pearl Harbor to support ground forces in Korea.

A unit of Task Force 77, the ship is commanded by Capt. Willard K. Goodney. Last week she continued in close support of the UN forces in the Seoul-Inchon area.

The former Atlantic fleet carrier, was in San Diego at the time of the outbreak of hostilities in the small Far Eastern country.

Receiving an urgent summons to rush to the assistance of the USS Valley Forge, the only aircraft carrier with Vice Adm. Arthur D. Struble's Seventh Fleet in the western Pacific, the carrier was quickly loaded with supplies and ammunition and left San Diego 5 July with Air Group Eleven embarked.

Arriving five days later in Pearl Harbor, she immediately began an intensive period of shakedown operations for her pilots and crew members. Most of her jet pilots had never flown their sleek Grumman Panthers from the deck of a carrier.

Ten days later, Adm. Arthur W. Radford, Commander in Chief Pacific and U. S. Pacific Fleet boarded the 27,000-ton Essex class carrier and informed her officers and men:

"You are sorely needed and I believe you are ready. You are to proceed at best possible sustained speed to the war area. Good luck. I know you will do the job."

The Philippine Sea lost no time in rushing to the aid of her sister ship in Korean waters. The peacetime schedule had called for her to relieve the USS Valley Forge in November.

The Philippine Sea air group is led by Comdr. Ralph Weymouth of Key West, Fla., and Coronado, Calif.

Double Marine Selections

The first of the 1951 Marine Corps selection boards for senior officers, all of which have been moved forward by about three months, was convened this week to nominate officers for promotion to major general.

The Marine Corps said that 13 officers are eligible for consideration, and added that four will be selected for temporary promotion to two-star rank. Only two officers were selected last year, and two the year previous.

At present, the Marine Corps has 26 brigadier generals on active duty, including officers designated for Supply Duty Only. In addition, there are currently 15 major generals serving in the Corps, plus three officers in higher ranks.

Basic criteria for the 1951 selections, the Corps said, is three years in grade as a brigadier general. Junior officer on the eligible list is Brig. Gen. Walter W. Wensinger, legal aid to the Marine Commandant, whose date of rank is 1 July 1948.

Other eligible Brigadier Generals are: Gerald C Thomas Christian F Schilt Henry D Linscott Ivan W Miller Edward A Craig William O Brice Thomas J Cushman Vernon E Megee William L McKittrick John T Selden L H M Sanderson Harry B Liveredge

The selection board appointed by Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews consists of one flag officer and eight general officers. They are: Major Generals Samuel L Howard, Alfred H. Noble, Louis E. Woods, Franklin A. Hart, William T. Clement, John T. Walker, Merwin H. Silverthorn, Ray A. Robinson, and Rear Adm. Alfred M. Pride.

Navy to Restore Aviators

The Navy is making plans to reinforce its air arm by restoring certain officers to flying status and returning a number of enlisted personnel to former commissioned ranks.

A board will be convened "in the near future," the Navy said, to consider "return to duty involving flying those temporary commissioned officers transferred to duties not involving flying by administrative action during fiscal year 1950."

The board will also consider "for return to temporary commissioned rank as Ensign, Lt. (jg) and Lieutenant, those enlisted personnel, warrant and chief warrant officers formerly temporary commissioned officers on duty involving flying, who were reverted to their permanent enlisted grade or warrant rank by administrative action during fiscal 1950, but who retained assignment to duty involving flying."

A Navy directive said that appointments will be in ranks previously held "except that present law governing appointments of enlisted personnel prohibits appointment to rank above lieutenant."

Personnel whose flight status was terminated by action of the Naval Aviator Disposition Board, or failure to meet required flight physical standards, will not be considered.

The Navy said that, in order to expedite the board's action, individual applications are not desired. Those selected will be advised and requested to inform the Bureau of Naval Personnel whether or not they desire to change their status. Orders changing status will be issued at a later date to meet the needs of the Service.

MCAS Construction

Long range plans for constructing permanent buildings at Marine Corps Air Station, El Toro, Calif., are now before the Planning and Development board of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics. This department will in turn submit the proposals to Congress.

This information comes from Col. Elliot E. Bard, station logistics officer, who has returned from a trip to Washington with Col. Pierson E. Conradt, El Toro's commanding officer, and members of his staff.

Although the plan is embryonic at present, a priority list of tentative projects has been approximated by the Station Planning and Development board at El Toro. The board is headed by Colonel Bard.

First on the priority list will be runways, taxiways and warm-up aprons. Next will be underground utilities, curbs, sidewalks, permanent barracks buildings and bachelor officer quarters. Included also is a plan for a new dispensary, increased storage space and Public Works working space.

The air station was commissioned in April, 1943, but no permanent buildings of any importance have been constructed, since it originally was intended as a temporary installation.

Two years ago the base was designated as permanent by the Chief of Naval Operations and a survey was made of existing facilities. One permanent building was found—a small concrete tool shed. According to the survey, the cost for reconstructing El Toro on a permanent base status was estimated at $50,000,000.

At present, Marine aviation possesses only one permanent station. This is at Cherry Point, N. C., home of the Second Marine Air Wing. A small field is also maintained at Quantico, Va.

No action is expected on the proposals for rebuilding El Toro's Air Station until Congress convenes in November for its new session.

and catapults capable of handling large planes.

But standing out in the program should be "the construction of a flush-deck carrier with possibly a modified 'island' on its deck" and that Congress will be asked for an authorization for this at the end of fiscal 1951 for the 1952 budget.

Stressing the need of a "long-range replacement program," Admiral Sherman stated that this will be necessary in order to have an effective carrier force six or seven years from now, and that the Navy is looking toward having 12 large carriers by the end of fiscal 1952.

By Admiral Sherman's figures, the Navy will be made up, by the end of fiscal 1951, of 10 large and 11 smaller carriers, two battleships, there being only one at present; 15 cruisers, there being only 13 at present; 10 destroyers will be expanded to 200, and at that time there will be 75 submarines. Admiral Sherman assured Chairman Vinson that many of the moth-ball fleet could be reconditioned within a month.

"National security demands this size Navy for long-range purposes" stated the Chief of Naval Operations and that "It had been agreed on by the Joint Chiefs of Staff before Korean hostilities started."

Admiral Sherman said that the Korean operation called for various expansions that threw the Navy out of balance; that there will be continuing emphasis on aircraft and reduction of heavy ships; that "the proposed fleet is to be a ready fleet"; and expressed it as his belief that "50 per cent of the war complement should be kept in readiness" but that "submarines should be kept 100 per cent ready."

Admiral Sherman summed up the building program of the Navy by stating that a total of 23 ships are under construction and are from eleven to 85 per cent completed, and that many types of ships are being converted.

Asked for the naval strength in the Korean conflict, Admiral Sherman stated that 90,000 personnel were engaged in it; 4 large carriers, 2 small carriers, one battleship, the Missouri, all of the Pacific Fleet cruisers plus one other one; plus mine-sweepers, destroyers, an amphibious lift for a reinforced battalion; and two Marine Corps Divisions, and that for the campaign the military sea transport service had been expanded.

According to Admiral Sherman, the battle casualties have been as follows: Navy—24 killed, 60 wounded, and 11 missing—a total of 95. Marine Corps—290 killed, 1,565 wounded, 30 missing—a total of 1,875.

Pressed by Chairman Vinson to indicate any lessons the Navy had learned from the Korean conflict, Admiral Sherman specified: (1) The need of having balanced forces—Army, Navy, Air Force, and within the Navy; (2) the need of being in readiness to fight; (3) we must distinguish sharply between those ready to fight and those in a potential group; (4) we have had lessons in supporting troops; and have had the opportunity to test weapons and materiel.

Admiral Sherman took occasion to commend Admiral Swanson and his staff for the care given to naval and Marine Corps personnel.

Chairman Vinson closed the session of the committee by stating that "the Navy is in good condition, and the hearing will enable the committee to care for the program planned by the Navy."

Marine Blood Donors

The Commanding Officer of the U. S. Naval Medical School at Bethesda, Md., has written to Marine Corps Headquarters in Washington to express his appreciation "for the fine response" made by Headquarters Marines to an appeal for blood donors.

The letter pointed out that HQMC had not only met its quota but had almost tripled the number of donors assigned. "It is only through cooperation such as you have given us," the letter said, "that we are able to meet our constant need."

Ration Value

The ration value for Midshipmen, USN, and Aviation Midshipman has been set at $1.25, effective 1 Oct.

Air Force Planning

That the Air Force is working on plans to expand beyond the present goal of 69 groups was brought out at a hearing of the House Armed Services Committee 3 Oct.

Air Force witnesses thought it best not to discuss details of such planning in open session, but committee members mentioned 95 groups as being one basis for study.

This session, the third of a series called by Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), chairman of the committee, had, as the main witness, Under Secretary of the Air Force John A. McCone, who gave information about the procurement program and its progress. Others testifying were Lt. Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Brig. Gen. Harlan C. Parks, Brig. Gen. Dan C. Ogle, and Brig. Gen. Horace A. Shepard.

Secretary McCone stated that one plant has been activated for the production of large engines for heavy bombers, and that four plants in all will have to be expanded at an initial cost of about $100,000,000 to increase the manufacturing facilities of plants for the production of jet engines for the Air Force and Navy.

It was revealed that production at the heavy bomber plant in Chicago, to be run by the Ford Co., will not get under way for 15 months because of the tooling that will have to be done, and that the peak of production will require three or four months after that. However, production at the other plants is under way.

According to Secretary McCone, the 2,600 planes authorized by the Supplementary Appropriation bill and 1,800 others authorized previously will be ready by December, 1952. Because information about the number of planes on hand is "classified," the Secretary declined to answer a question along that line. The present authorized 58 groups are to be fitted out with the 4,400 planes.

Stating that the present objective is 69 groups to be developed by the end of 1953, Secretary McCone indicated that the 2,600 planes authorized by the supplementary appropriation will be the first for the increased number of groups, and that to equip the proposed number will require 2,400 planes a year.

As proving that his Department is "driving to have the program forwarded," Secretary McCone stated that letter commitments for $3,976 planes, involving an expenditure of $3,452,000,000 had been made and that other commitments will be made when further study is completed on certain items. Because labor and management have been working with his Department, the only problem, according to the Secretary, arises from the increasing cost of wages and materials. The probable increase in these items by the time the program is under way, he said, will probably be seven or eight per cent. Such an increase in cost would require the elimination of 750 fighter or other planes or an added appropriation of between $315,000,000 and $360,000,000. Chairman Carl Vinson quickly interpolated that Congress "must control prices or provide the additional money."

Asked about the progress in the Radar Screen, Secretary McCone stated that this will be completed by 1 July 1951, that 24 critical stations will be completed by 1 Jan., and that the stations will be manned by 1 March. All in the continental United States are to be finished by 1 July 1951, and those in Alaska will be substantially completed by the end of the building season in September 1951.

As to the entire procurement program of the AF, Chairman Vinson commented that: "It is reassuring to know the program is developing so well."

To a question by Chairman Vinson as to the number of general officers in the Air Force, the reply of Generals Twining and Parks was—three 4-star, three 3-star, 98 two-star, and 128 one-star personnel, and that 200 of them are pilots and 27 non-pilots, but that not all are in command billets. On 25 June, active duty personnel consisted of 54,914 officers, 2,092 warrant officers, and 354,271 airmen, a total of 411,277, and that of the officers, 25,000 are pilots and 5,200 with other ratings. Of the 25,000, fifty per cent are in positions requiring constant flying.

The figures of other ranks were as follows: colonels, 1,847; lieutenant colonels, 3,887; majors, 7,601; captains, 17,521; first lieutenants, 19,267; second lieutenants, 4,564. Supplementary figures released were that at the end of September, the Air Force had a strength of 486,000 officers and men, 66,550 of whom were officers, whereas the total strength at the end of August was 411,000.

It was agreed that training facilities would have to be increased unless the Army and Navy are able to lend some facilities.

The committee was told that to man 58 groups a total of 568,000 personnel would be needed—80,000 officers and 488,000 enlisted. The total for the 69 groups was not supplied.

Concerning information that there are 58,442 in the Organized Reserves and 314,000 Volunteer Reserves, Chairman Vinson commented that there has been too much generosity in giving rank to the Reserves and that they should be "screened to learn their actual strength. There is need for a bona fide roll of Reserves; there must be a restudy of this in all the Departments."

The Air National Guard was represented as composed of 27 groups, and 44,982 personnel as of 25 June. Five of these groups (undesignated) have been alerted for active duty as of 1 Oct.

Figures released on Korean casualties in the Air Force were as follows: killed, 22; 37 were wounded and lived, 32 other wounded died; 88 are missing.

Also revealed was the fact that in the Far East there are 53,054 Air Force personnel, all operating in the Korean area.

At a later session, the Air Force will be called on to outline lessons from Korea and ideas about tactical air support of ground troops.

Chairman Vinson congratulated Secretary McCone on the progress of the procurement program, and thanked the other witnesses for the information given the committee.

Airmen Promotions

The escalator for airmen promotions to top grades continued upward this month as Headquarters revealed an October quota of 15,800 advancements.

By 20 Oct., 1,800 promotions to master sergeant, 1,625 to technical sergeant, 4,675 to staff sergeant and 7,700 to sergeant may be made by major commanders.

Last month's quota was 13,500 and the quota for the previous month was 7,000.

For the first time, Reserves recalled to active duty will be included in the promotion program. Air Force officials said promotions of Reservists would be temporary, although Regulars receive permanent advancement.

Also temporary will be the promotions of SCARWAF personnel.

For security reasons, the Air Force declined to release data on specific promotion quotas for the various commands.

Air Force Recalls

The Air Force has given its Continental Air Command authority to recall, voluntarily or involuntarily, in a non-rated status Reserve officers who hold flying ratings.

The Air Force said that Reserve officers recalled for flying assignments would retain their flight pay and so will Reserve officers who have an immediate flight combat potential.

However, a Reserve officer who holds a rating, for example, as a C-46 pilot and who is recalled to fill an administrative billet will be placed in a non-flying status.

Capt. and Lt. Promotions

The Air Force disclosed this week that Headquarters has received reports from all field commanders listing officers fully qualified for temporary promotion to the grade of Captain under the current grade adjustment program.

Additionally, the Air Force said it is taking steps to review the records of those eligible officers who, due to their recent assignment, could not be considered by field commanders concerned.

It is planned that initial promotion announcements will be made this month, although the numbers to be promoted in the initial and subsequent increments will be governed by the number of vacancies available under current fiscal programs.

Major commanders, the Air Force reported, currently retain authority to promote officers to the temporary grade of first lieutenant upon completion of 18 months' service as second lieutenant.

In addition, in August, commanders were authorized to promote to the temporary rank of first lieutenant any fully qualified officer then serving on active duty as a second lieutenant who held a valid USAFR or National Guard commission as a first lieutenant.

New Air Generals

General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Chief of Staff, USAF, on 5 Oct. announced the recess appointments by the President of three Air Force colonels to the temporary grade of brigadier general. Promotions were effective as of 4 Oct.

The officers promoted, and their assignments as brigadier generals, are:

Brig. Gen. John S. Mills, recently appointed Commanding General, Special Weapons Command, Kirtland AFB, Albuquerque, N. M. General Mills will report to his new assignment about 10 Oct. He has been assistant to the Deputy Chief of Staff, Operations, for Atomic Energy, at USAF Headquarters. General Mills is replacing Brig. Gen. Howard G. Bunker at Kirtland and General Bunker will replace General Mills at USAF Headquarters.

Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckles, who is Director of Public Information, Far East Air Forces, Tokyo, Japan.

Brig. Gen. Edwin M. Day, Inspector General of the Strategic Air Command, Offutt AFB, Omaha, Nebr.

Airlift Report

The Pacific Airlift is now exceeding the Berlin Airlift by 10,000 plane miles per day, the Military Air Transport Service announced this week. "Operation Vittles" averaged about 242,000 plane miles per day while the Pacific Airlift in September averaged about 252,000 plane miles per day, Maj Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, MATS Commander, reported.

"Four-engine transport planes are now being dispatched across the Pacific at the rate of one every hour and 15 minutes," General Kuter stated.

During the three months of the Korean crisis, the Military Air Transport Service and its civilian contractors have hauled nearly 8,000 tons of high priority cargo westward across the Pacific. This tonnage includes almost 34,000 passengers—troop replacements or personnel with special skills. Approximately the same number of passengers have been returned to the U. S. on eastbound Pacific Airlift flights which have carried a gross payload of 6,800 tons including cargo and passenger weight.

During the same time MATS airplanes have evacuated more than 4,400 medical patients from the Pacific to the United States and redistributed them to hospitals nearest their homes when possible. This high priority medical traffic has been carried in aircraft which delivered urgently required personnel and equipment to Japan. Thus, the air evacuation load travels in space that otherwise would not be totally used and therefore might be considered free transportation.

MATS has more than doubled the utilization of its aircraft with the recall, training and placement of more than 1,100 flight and maintenance personnel during the last three months.

Restudy Medical Office

"The Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee, after extensive study, recommended the establishment of a Medical Services Division, with a Director of Medical Services as its head. The Director serves as medical advisor and reports directly to the Secretary of Defense.

"The Medical Services Division, later renamed the Office of Medical Services, established policies, programs and standards for the medical and health services of the Army, Navy, and Air Force and for civilian employees of our Defense Department.

"The period of 1945 to 1949 found our military medical services expending their major effort on big hospitals, big residency programs and other activities beyond the direct support of the Armed Forces. Obviously the military establishment must have hospitals, and the best hospitals; likewise, the training of military physicians must continue on a scale and of a type which will produce the finest possible care for the men and women in uniform. But when such programs are permitted to completely overshadow the military supporting functions for which the medical services were created, our medical preparedness is jeopardized. When, as in 1949, the military medical logistic experts, whose planning was so evident in establishing the medical records of World War II, find themselves largely forgotten and the vital aspects of field, fleet and combat medicine ignored, then we cannot truthfully report to the nation that we are medically ready.

"The most urgent task facing the new Office of Medical Services in the late summer of 1949 was to re-orient the military medical services to their primary mission of supporting the combat forces. It was a case of getting back to fundamentals. The basic reason for the existence of the military medical services is to provide support for the men who fight. If this mission is obscured, the rest of the vast medical organization is practically impotent. Most of you have served in uniform and you realize that the practice of military medicine is inherently different from private practice. At home, your patients come to you in your office, hospital, or clinic. The military medical officer must understand, plan, and coordinate the medical phases of the logistic machinery by which the sick soldier, sailor, marine, and airman get to the place of treatment. Until this job is done, diagnostic and curative medicine cannot begin, regardless of the size, name or staff of the hospital.

"Here, then, was the pressing job to be done—the emphasizing of field medicine, of medical supply and transport, of logistics, intelligence and staff planning—the basic phases of military medicine for which the military commander looks to his medical staff.

"From the time the original instructions went out to the three military departments in October, 1949, to the present, the Office of Medical Services has continued to underscore the military medical mission in support of the men who fight. The dividends from that program are reflected in the figures from the Korea fighting. Major General Hume, Chief Surgeon to General MacArthur, has reported that the death rate among wounded men under medical care is by far the lowest of any similar campaign in our history.

"When the Korean fighting began, the military forces had at their disposal a complete system for the air transportation of patients. It was already in operation and it covered both the continental United States and overseas points. This was not an accident or luck; it was the result of a policy established by the Department of Defense in September, 1949, which set up air evacuation as the standard method of transportation for military patients both at home and overseas. Studies conducted for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as well as my own experience in developing air evacuation in World War II had shown that air transportation not only is a lifesaving measure for many patients but that it is logically more sound than surface transportation. For example, in moving 300 patients a distance of 10,000 miles, the medical personnel savings are interesting: 282 man-days are required by air and no physician is needed. In contrast, surface vessels require 5,670 man-days, including the services of eight physicians. These and other considerations, once they were carefully outlined, led to the adoption of air evacuation throughout the Armed Forces. Today, this system is returning many of the men wounded in Korea to this country in as little as 10 days. The comments of professional men concerning the excellent physical and mental condition of these patients arriving in this country are too numerous to recite here. The small incidence of infection and the low morbidity speak louder than words of mine for such a sound system of air evacuation in conjunction with the finest of professional care.

"Experience during and after World War II had shown that a comprehensive system for securing whole blood and plasma quickly and in quantity was absolutely essential in time of war or other disaster. Many agencies and organizations, national and local, were willing and able to assist the Armed Forces in supplying these needs, but no mechanism existed through which the military establishment could capitalize on these resources. In October, 1949, I established a committee which developed a Department of Defense Blood Program. The American National Red Cross agreed to serve as a central coordinating organization for procuring and supplying the whole blood for military needs. Individual donors throughout the country contribute blood, which is collected by many organizations and channelled into military requirements through the Red Cross organization.

"As you well know, blood must be used within 21 days from the time it is taken from the donor. General MacArthur has advised us that blood drawn, collected and refrigerated in the United States and flown to Korea in September for use among the wounded has arrived in such excellent condition that not a single unit was lost by being outdated.

"These, then, are a few of the things which have been done to prepare the country medically for such an emergency as Korea and for any other Korea which may be forced upon us.

"For the first time, we are really utilizing our military medical facilities jointly. In Korea, we have Navy and British hospital ships; Air Force, Navy, and Marine planes; Army, Navy, Air Force and Swedish hospitals—all of these serving our fighting men and those of our allies. Our medical facilities also are jointly utilized in Japan, Hawaii, and here in the United States. Navy hospitals in this country have earmarked 4,280 beds for Army and Air Force patients; Army hospitals have earmarked 2,200 beds for Navy and Air Force patients, and the Air Force is hospitalizing all the patients arriving from overseas until they can be assigned to inland hospitals of all three military services.

"In short, we now have, in being, a coordinated hospital program for the Armed Forces."

Doctors to EAD

Meantime, Secretary of Defense Marshall directed the Department of the Navy to order to active duty immediately enough V-12-trained Navy Reserve medical officers without prior service, to meet requirements for all three military departments. The Navy also was instructed to assign these medical officers to duty with the Army and Air Force to meet their needs, on the basis of allocations approved by the Director of Medical Services, Department of Defense.

The Department of the Army has requested the Department of the Navy to immediately assign 570 Navy medical reservists to duty with the Army. The first increment of 235 to meet immediate needs of the Army are required to be on duty at their designated stations by 15 Oct.

The action was taken in accordance with recent instructions from the President and conforms to the priority system for recall of medical and dental reserve officers established by the Department of Defense on 7 Sept., 1950, and later incorporated in Public Law 779, 81st Congress.

The first priority group includes medical and dental reserve officers, other than members of Organized Reserve units, who participated in the ASTP or V-12 training programs of the Army and Navy and who have had no subsequent military service as medical or dental officers. It is from this group that the Navy will call reserves to duty under today's directive of the Secretary of Defense.

The second priority group includes ASTP and V-12 participants who served as military medical or dental officers after completion of training.

The third and final priority group includes all other reservists.

Of the 1,429 Navy reserve medical officers in priority group one, some 1,350 are available for immediate call to active duty. The remainder are members of Organized Reserve units not subject to call. The Army is calling to active duty the 38 Army medical reserve officers in priority group one. In addition, the Army is ordering to active duty approximately 280 reserve medical officers in grades and specialties not available in priority group one.

Congratulate Gen. MacArthur

The Joint Chiefs of Staff on 29 Sept. sent to General of the Army Douglas MacArthur the following message:

"The Joint Chiefs of Staff are proud of the great successes you have achieved. We realize that they would have been impossible without brilliant and audacious leadership and without the full cooperation and the fighting spirit of all forces and all arms. From the sudden initiation of hostilities you have exploited to the utmost all capabilities and opportunities. Your transition from defensive to offensive operations was magnificently planned, timed and executed. You have given new inspiration to the freedom-loving peoples of the world. We remain completely confident that the great task entrusted to you by the United Nations will be carried to a successful conclusion."

SATURDAY, 7 OCTOBER 1950

"We have established the principle that the country's welfare in time of peace and its safety in time of war depends to an important extent upon the existence of a highly organized aircraft industry for the production of planes, and a well established system for their operation for commercial transportation." —GENERAL GEORGE C. MARSHALL.

OUR PRIORITY LIST

1. Early construction of adequate Government quarters for commissioned and enlisted personnel at all permanent stations, supplemented by satisfactory legislation to encourage private building of dwelling units near Service installations.
2. Improved retirement pay for wounded and disabled personnel.
3. Continuance and extension of medical and dental care for families of Service personnel; provision for education at Government expense of children of Service personnel on duty at stations where suitable free schools are not available; and survivor benefits for dependents.
4. Restoration of military exemptions from Federal income tax, broadened to exclude all retired pay from taxation.
5. Early attainment and continued maintenance of a fully-manned 70-group Air Force.
6. Prompt construction of a radar fence and air warning net to cover all avenues of hostile air approach.
7. Rapid expansion of our submarine fleet and accelerated development of anti-submarine vessels and equipment, with continued experimentation and construction of new Naval types.
8. Organization and training of a balanced Mobile Ground Force, including air-borne and amphibious troops, of sufficient strength and ready, with complete and modern equipment, for immediate action in an emergency.
9. Accelerated and improvement of the organization and training of the National Guard, Organized Reserves and other civilian components of the Armed Forces, with appropriate training facilities, and restoration of inactive training day for all elements.
10. Continued scientific research and development in all new and unconventional devices and methods of warfare backed by industry and labor kept constantly ready and trained through production and educational orders.
11. Close supervision and constant restudy of Service promotion and elimination policies and procedures, to insure the prevention or prompt correction of injustices and inequities.

"'Brass' is Solid Gold." No finer tribute could have come to the career personnel of the Armed Forces than the letter sent to Secretary of Defense Marshall by Mr. Stephen T. Early upon the occasion of the latter's relinquishing his post as the first Deputy Secretary of Defense. "I have discovered," Mr. Early wrote, "how unselfishly they serve and how constant are these men and women to their single purpose—the security of the United States. . . . I know now how constantly civilian-minded are these military men. I have discovered that in the United States of America, our 'brass' is solid gold." In the years since he served as a captain of Infantry in World War I Mr. Early has had exceptional opportunity to know the American military leaders. During a long and outstanding career as a Washington correspondent with the Associated Press and the United Press and as a representative of news reel organizations, he was in frequent contact with Service leaders in situations that gave him ample chance to observe them critically. Twelve years in the White House with Presidents Roosevelt and Truman gave him an inside picture of their day to day relations with the commanders-in-chief. He accepted the post in the Department of Defense for one year, but was prevailed upon to stretch it to nearly two. The Services know how valuable he has been in setting the new organization on its feet and it is with regret but with the best of wishes that they see him go. His fine letter, which Secretary Marshall is distributing to the Services, is a mark of admiration that all appreciate.

Dependent Care. In its study of the functions of the Department of Defense's Office of Medical Services we hope that General McNarney's Management Committee will give special attention to the problem of maintaining an adequate program of care for members of the families of Service personnel. No one knows better than the new Secretary of Defense, General George C. Marshall, the vital importance of a dependent care program to the morale, and hence the efficiency, of the fighting forces. Unfortunately, the Office of Medical Services has been somewhat less than enthusiastic in shaping plans that will assure the continuance of the traditional system of dependent care. In fact, members of the House Committee on Armed Services have charged that such family care is jeopardized by the economy program pursued by the Office of Medical Services. Last February, the Secretary of Defense directed the Personnel Policy Board to make a survey to determine the effect of dependent care upon service morale, but as far as has been publicly admitted nothing has come of it. Certainly, the Management Committee would be well within its scope if it should inquire as to what the Office of Medical Services has done in the matter of dependent care.

U. S. Naval Academy. Next Tuesday, 10 October, marks the 105th anniversary of the founding of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. Actually it was established as the "Naval School" where midshipmen were given their first and fifth years of instruction, the intervening three years being spent at sea. Five years later the name was changed to the U. S. Naval Academy and a course of study of four consecutive years was established. Its founding represented an inter-service arrangement and was as informal as its history has been glorious. George Bancroft, the historian, had just been appointed Secretary of the Navy by President Polk. After a survey of the then existing system of instructing midshipmen at the Navy yards, he decided to establish a school and selected an old Army post at Annapolis—Fort Severn—as the site. An informal note to the Secretary of War was returned with the latter's approval scribbled on the back. An equally informal presentation to President Polk was returned with the latter's acceptance written on the back of the envelop. Thus Fort Severn passed to Naval control and the Academy was established—without benefit of Congressional action. Its contributions to the Navy and the Nation have been beyond measure. Today it is the keystone of Naval education around which revolves the system of using NROTC institutions for the procurement of officers for the expanded Navy. The Nation and all the Services salute it on its anniversary.

Air Force Rank

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

During World War II the military service, of necessity, adopted the practice of appointing junior officers in rank of a given grade to command positions over senior officers of the same grade when the exigencies of a situation dictated that such action was desirable.

As applied in the present day U. S. Air Force this practice has become a vicious challenge that threatens to destroy the fundamental requirement for an orderly and systemized observance of rank and precedence so vitally necessary to good order, military discipline and harmonious accomplishment of the military mission. It is now a common occurrence for an officer senior in rank to be subordinated to his juniors when being assigned to a staff position within a headquarters. Thus, we have the unhealthy situation of juniors rendering efficiency reports on their seniors. Likewise, in this instance, juniors are responsible for rendering recommendations for promotion on their seniors. Regardless of how impartial an officer is he generally will not recommend a senior for promotion when he himself is not eligible for promotion, and certainly the element of professional jealousy may disolor an efficiency report submitted by a junior on a senior officer.

Add to this undesirable situation the fact that socially and in military pursuits such as boards of officer functions, courts-martial, military committees, etc., each officer serves in the capacity determined by his true rank, notwithstanding his subordinate position to brother members and juniors occupationally and professionally (jobwise), and the situation really becomes confusing. What prerogative of rank may be judiciously exercised by whom and when?

It seems to me that the present promotion and elimination system is adequate to put our military house in order in this respect, and restore the dignity of seniority in rank that must exist within the military establishment if each officer is to discharge the responsibilities that are naturally and logically his by virtue of his rank.

There are at least four actions open to a commanding officer or commanding general which would eliminate the above cited unhappy circumstances, namely: (1) Promote a junior in rank to the next higher grade so that he will automatically ascend to a superior status; (2) Eliminate those officers that are senior in rank but considered less competent than any junior officer assigned to the same staff section or office; (3) Reassign a senior officer in rank when circumstances would otherwise require him to serve in a subordinate capacity to an officer junior to him in rank; (4) Assign the officer senior in rank to the position to which his rank entitles him.

Captain, USAF.

A very important board of officers, having to do with Navy aviation and its further development, has been ordered to convene at the Navy Department. This board will recommend a policy on the proportion of officer aviators to enlisted aviation pilots, and will also recommend a system of detail for duty by which officers specializing in aeronautics will broaden their careers to fit them for the higher commands in aviation, and for the commands usually given to commanders, captains and rear admirals.

The withdrawal of the major part of our Army from China has been discounted for several days, but marks one of the first moves in the policy of this Government to refrain from giving even moral support to any action which may lead to the dismemberment of the Chinese Empire. General Chaffee's work has been done, and well done, and he will be simply left in China in command of 1,400 men to protect the American Legation and to conserve our interests generally.

Mystery still hangs about the solution of that famous problem which related to Monroe, Maximilian, and Mexico. It is an entire novelty for secrecy to invest for many weeks, any Government measure. So soon as an official does anything he puts it in the newspapers. In any event, here is a genuine puzzle, and annoying as it proves to a people unaccustomed to reticence in its rulers, still it has the charm of variety, and affords a pleasant subject for speculation.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—The General Assembly of the United Nations this week spent most of its time discussing the Korean question, with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinski conducting a filibuster against the adoption of a resolution providing for the final settlement of the crisis and the unification of Korea. This resolution is sponsored by Great Britain and seven other member nations and has the approval of the United States. By implication it authorizes the crossing of the 38th parallel by United Nations troops, and it provides for a free election under United Nations auspices and the withdrawal of foreign troops as soon as practicable. The resolution was overwhelmingly approved by the United Nations political committee with only the Russian bloc in opposition.

In attacking this resolution Mr. Vishinski repeated his previous charge that the South Koreans, at the instigation of the United States, had begun hostilities by the invasion of North Korea. He ignored the report of the United Nations Commission in Korea which found that this charge was completely without foundation.

As a substitute for the British resolution the Soviet delegate proposed that belligerents cease hostilities in Korea, that United Nations troops be immediately withdrawn, and that national elections be held throughout Korea under the direction of representatives of North and South Korea, with a United Nations Commission, with Russia and Red China included in the membership, observing the election. He also proposed that plans be made for economic and technical aid to Korea by the United Nations, and that consideration be given to admitting that country to membership in the United Nations.

The Russian proposal received little support from non-Communist countries. It was pointed out that the Security Council had issued a cease-fire order at the outbreak of hostilities on 25 June but that this order had been defied by the North Koreans, and that the withdrawal of United Nations forces now after attaining the victory would be surrendering to the vanquished all that had been accomplished in three months of hard fighting.

Russia this week rejected demands made by Great Britain, France and the United States for an accounting of World War II prisoners still held in the Soviet Union. The western powers charged that hundreds of thousands of German soldiers who surrendered to Russia are still held by that country. The Russian reply said that the charges "do not correspond to the facts," and insisted that there were in Russia only about 13,000 German prisoners, who either had been convicted of war crimes or were under investigation in connection therewith. In addition, the Russian note said, there were 14 undergoing medical treatment.

Western allies had asked for information about military prisoners and civilian internees who had died in Russia, but the Soviet reply ignored the request. The western powers estimate that at least 400,000 German World War II prisoners taken by Russia remain unaccounted for, while some German estimates place the number as high as a million and a half. The Russians insist that all except 13,000 have been repatriated. Similarly charges have been made that Russia still holds large numbers of Japanese prisoners of war, concerning whom no information can be secured.

Soviet-inspired Communist demonstrations in West Germany last Sunday proved a fizzle. Red agitators from East Germany entered the British zone and called upon 200,000 West German Communists to create havoc by seizing municipal buildings and demonstrating against the occupation authorities and the West German government. Some 20,000 responded, but the demonstrations were confined to minor riots, fist-fighting and stone-throwing, easily controlled by the police. No buildings were seized and casualties were confined to minor bruises. The failure of the well-advertised demonstrations was a hard blow to Communist prestige.

In Vienna a Communist-inspired general strike was attempted in protest against the rising cost of living and the failure of workers to receive a corresponding wage increase. The Labor party, though concerned about inequities of the Austrian economic situation, refused to join in the Communist protest.

French troops in Indo-China this week scored notable successes against Communist guerrillas. French paratroops and infantry captured Thainguyen, the Red military headquarters, supply base and transportation center. This town is a key point on the limited highway system of northern Indo-China and its capture by the French will seriously interfere with Communist communications. In minor jungle operations the French captured a number of Red prisoners at several different points.

General Douglas MacArthur, Commanding American Forces in the Far East, this week withdrew the American military mission from Formosa. No explanation was forthcoming, but the State Department said the action had no political implications. However, the withdrawal lessened the force of the charge that American troops had occupied Chinese territory by being in Formosa. It also may indicate the belief of the American high command that there is no immediate danger of a Red invasion of Formosa.

Mr. Harold E. Stassen, former governor of Minnesota and now president of the University of Pennsylvania, disclosed this week that he had written Joseph Stalin, suggesting that the Russian government change its present policies and move toward peace and co-operation with other countries. He proposed to convince Marshal Stalin of the wisdom of such a course either through correspondence or a personal conference. This action was taken by the university president without consultation with the State Department, which declined official comment.

More Army Generals—It became increasingly obvious this week that the Army will have to make a number of general officer promotions to meet requirements of the expansion program. Doubtless, the first increment of these promotions will be made soon.

The Army recently announced initial temporary promotions to all ranks below that of brigadier general and stated that more temporary promotions will be made before the end of the year.

Meantime, new orders show that at least several divisions are now under command of officers who have the rank of brigadier general, instead of major general. In at least one instance, an assistant division commander is a colonel.

Aside from the necessity to promote officers to fill billets in the United States, speculation persists that there may be some promotion of officers to higher general officer rank in Korea. For example, Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker conceivably might be given a fourth star, since the commanding general of an army in the field normally holds the rank of general. Also, as a corps commander, Maj. Gen. Edward Almond might be given a third star.

The likelihood is that the President will make some recess appointments of Army officers to and within general officer ranks prior to Congress' reconvening late next month. Whether commanders in Korea would receive increased rank, however, was uncertain this week.

Civil Aviation and Defense—Civil aviation has become such an integral part in the vital U. S. transportation system that adequate provision for it must be made in any system of allocations or priorities required for our Defense effort, in the opinion of Representative Lindley Beckworth (D-Tex), Chairman of the Transportation Subcommittee of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

"In any system of allocations or priorities, the equipment and materials needed to maintain the contribution of civil aviation should be provided on the same basis as is accorded other components of our transportation system," Representative Beckworth declares in an article in the October issue of "Planes," official publication of the Aircraft Industries Association. "The supply of transport and other planes used in business, and replacement parts, is clearly adaptable to National Defense and should be made available therefor as is the supply of equipment and replacements parts for the railroads and the steamship lines."

Adoption of this principle, he added, "will necessitate recognition by our government agency charged with priorities and allocations of recent trends within civil aviation and its increased capacity in relation to other branches of transportation and in the economy as a whole." He pointed out that all branches of civil aviation would be penalized by any plan which permitted manufacture of planes and parts at the current or 1949 level, because such production was at an extremely low level during 1949 and early 1950.

Chemical Corps Status—One year ago this month Maj. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe fresh from command of the 24th Infantry Division in Japan became Chief of the Chemical Corps.

Although General McAuliffe, World War II commander of the famed 101st Airborne Division in the defense of Bastogne during the Battle of the Bulge, had been Deputy Director for research and development of the Logistics Division of the Army General Staff prior to his 24th Infantry Division assignment, the appointment of a non-scientist to head the Chemical Corps was the occasion for some concern both within the Chemical Corps and among key leaders in science and industry. And on Capitol Hill, there was some questioning of the Army's action.

That this concern has been utterly dispelled is evident in a first anniversary review of General McAuliffe's service and in the notable record which Chemical Corps personnel have achieved during the fighting in Korea. Within the Chemical Corps, morale is reported at an all-time high. Relations with industry are most satisfactory and cooperative. The critical aspect of this problem is reflected in the fact that about 90 per cent of the materiel employed by the Chemical Corps is strictly military in nature and has no civilian counterpart. Thus, a close relationship between the Chemical Corps and the chemical industry is vital to National Defense.

Scientists characteristically are skeptical of decisions made by non-scientists in matters pertaining to complex research and development. It is known that some members of leading scientific societies viewed the appointment of General McAuliffe with something less than all-out enthusiasm. However, the past year has seen an obvious resolution of this problem and it is significant that General McAuliffe has received numerous invitations to address meetings of scientific societies throughout the Nation.

The success of the Chemical Corps Chief in building the morale of his Corps and in earning complete respect of the chemical industry and the nation's scientists ultimately could be judged best only in actual combat. The "proof of the pudding" came with outbreak of hostilities in Korea. There, the Chemical Corps has won plaudits from General of the Army Douglas MacArthur and his subordinate commanders for outstanding service.

Delay in Korean Ribbon—Despite the fact that Army authorities are known to have submitted specifications for a Korean Campaign Ribbon weeks ago, the Department of Defense has yet to give final approval. Meantime, hundreds of service personnel wounded in action and returned to the United States, who want authority to wear such a ribbon to denote their recent service, are kept waiting for conclusion of red tape procedures.

It is understood that the proposed ribbon is mostly blue—the color is called U. N. blue—with white trimming.

New Army Insignia—Although Army officials said this week that final approval has not been obtained for the new designs, it is believed certain that an early announcement will be made pertaining to insignia for the Armor and Artillery branches. The recently enacted Army Reorganization Act abolished the Cavalry and created the Armor branch. The Field Artillery and Coast Artillery were combined into the Artillery.

Service Leave—Fears that the leave rider on the 1951 appropriation bill would apply to commissioned personnel of the Armed Services were dispelled by the Comptroller General in a decision rendered this week to the Civil Service Commission. The Comptroller General, Lindsey Warren, ruled that the rider is a "permanent restriction upon payments for annual leave earned by civilian officers or employees of the Government during the calendar year 1950." His use of the word "civilian," is taken as a limitation and that military personnel are therefore excluded from the restriction.

In connection with Service leave it should be noted that the President on 23 Sept. signed the bill making legal the system of crediting leave as favored by the Departments rather than letting the less liberal interpretation of the Comptroller General stand. The new law (PL 818—81st Cong.) adds the following phraseology to Section 3 (b) of the Leave Act of 1946: "except that leave actually taken during any fiscal year may be charged to leave accruing during such fiscal year without regard to such sixty-day limitation: Provided, That no cash settlement shall be made for unused or accumulated leave in excess of sixty days upon discharge or retirement subsequent to August 31, 1946." The amendment is effective as of 31 Aug. 1946.

JAG Refresher Course—The Judge Advocate General, Department of the Army, has announced the establishment, on 2 Oct. 1950, of a special Judge Advocate General's Course for refresher training and instruction of Reserve officers of the Judge Advocate General's Corps of the Army who are being called to active duty, and such other qualified legal officers as will be designated. The Course, operated on a five-week schedule under the supervision of Col. Edward H. Young of the Office of The Judge Advocate General, former Commandant of the wartime Judge Advocate General's School, will provide for the mentioned student officers a thorough review course in the duties and functions of a Staff Judge Advocate, with particular emphasis on military justice.

Maj. Gen. Ernest M. Brannon, The Judge Advocate General, Maj. Gen. Franklin P. Shaw, The Assistant Judge Advocate General, and Brig. Gen. James L. Harbaugh, Jr., Chairman of the Judicial Council, were present at the opening session of the Course, conducted by Colonel Young at South Post, Fort Myer, Va. General Brannon delivered a brief welcoming address to the first class.

Admiral "Honorary Colonel"—Thirty-one years after Capt. William R. Thayer, USN, deputy commander of the Military Sea Transport Service, was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy, he became what many Sixth Army officials declare the first Naval officer to be commissioned an "honorary colonel" in the United States Army. In a ceremony in the office of Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commanding general of the Sixth Army, Captain Thayer recently was designated honorary colonel of the 38th Regimental Combat Team, Second Infantry Division (now fighting in Korea) in recognition of his cooperation in moving the regimental combat team to the Far East Command soon after the outbreak of fighting in Korea.

As part of the ceremony he received a Second Division shoulder patch, the eagles of an Army colonel, and the crossed rifle insignia of the 38th Infantry, plus a certificate attesting to his achievement in getting the unit to Korea prepared to fight upon landing. The certificate and insignia were presented Captain Thayer by General Wedemeyer in the name of Col. George B. Peploe presently commanding the 38th.

When the Second Division was alerted to leave Seattle for Korea, Captain Thayer said that the MSTS had about 10 days to prepare the transport to move the unit. One of the biggest problems involved was keeping the troops in combat readiness during the 12-day voyage to Korea, but MSTS did its share of the job. Equipment was moved and decks were cleared. All the way across the Pacific guns chattered as a full program of training was carried out daily until the unit debarked in Korea, ready for combat.

Infantry Center—A complete survey of the organization and activities of the Infantry School, Ft. Benning, Ga., has been completed by Maj. Gen. John W. O'Daniel, former commanding general of the Infantry Center. The general was recently recalled from Moscow, where he has been serving as military attaché, to work with General Mark Clark, Chief of Army Field Forces, Fort Monroe, Va., on plans to speed up Army training.

Lt. Col. Derek W. Lister, British Army, has been named British Liaison officer to Army Field Forces Board No. 3, it was announced this week.

"Tin Sword"—Malcolm Stuart Boylan, author of a number of films on military subjects including "Hell Divers," "Navy Blue and Gold," "Devil Dogs of the Air" and many others, has written his first novel, "Tin Sword," which was published 7 Oct. by Little, Brown & Co.

Boylan entered the Army as a private, serving in the photographic section of the Signal Corps at Camp Kearny, Calif., in 1917. After completing officers' training at Columbia University he served as a lieutenant in L company of the 160th Infantry. He also served as an officer in military intelligence in the Officers Reserve Corps and with the California National Guard.

He started working on the idea of a Coast Guard Reserve in 1934, and was influential in its being established by law. He was commodore of the Coast Guard Auxiliary for the Eleventh Naval District. As a lieutenant commander in the temporary reserve he was assistant to Rear Adm. Frank D. Higbee when the latter was a commander and serving as Captain of the Port of Los Angeles.

He is the son of the late Robert J. Boylan, sr., who served in the Seventh Cavalry before and during the Spanish-American war. His brother, Robert J. Boylan and his son-in-law William C. Drewry served on combat ships in the South Pacific during World War II as lieutenant commanders.

"Tin Sword" is the story of a young Michigan boy whose sole driving ambition is to receive an appointment to the U. S. Military Academy at West Point. While waiting to become of legal age for an appointment he goes through a series of adventures that take him from Battle Creek, Mich., to Chicago, and Washington, D. C.

MP School Changes Name—The Military Police School, at Camp Gordon, Ga., has been redesignated as The Provost Marshal General's School. The School, originally established at Fort Meyer, Va., in January 1942, was designated at that time as The Provost Marshal General's School. In November 1946 when located at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., the name was changed to "The Military Police School."

PMGS is now directly under the supervision of Maj. Gen. Edwin P. Parker, The Provost Marshal General of the Army. The present Commandant, Col. Francis E. Howard, assumed that position in July.

Navy Nurse Corps—A Navy nurse who is an amputee has been recalled to active service for a special "inspirational" duty assignment at the Navy Amputee Center, U. S. Naval Hospital, Oakland, Calif. She is Lieutenant (jg) Sara J. Griffin, USN-Ret. An injury to her left leg sustained in a fall while on duty at the Naval Operating Base, Guantanamo, Cuba, in 1947 resulted in amputation below the knee.

Lieutenant Griffin volunteered for the special assignment, which will involve the rehabilitation of amputees at the Oakland center. "It was felt that Miss Griffin could render a unique and valuable service to the Navy and to her country, and that her assignment to this duty would be an inspiration to amputees of the Armed Forces being rehabilitated at the Oakland hospital," Rear Adm. C. A. Swanson, Surgeon General of the Navy, said.

Pension and Retirement Rights—The third edition of "Pension and Retirement Rights," an interesting and handy little booklet is now available. Included are a set of pay charts and chapters on Veterans' benefits, Reserve and National Guard, Regular Services, and survivors benefits. The material was gathered from the many sources over which it is normally scattered and condensed into the 48 page booklet by Lt. Col. S. F. Tillman, USAR, of 3000 Connecticut Ave. NW, Washington 8, D. C.

THE Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Frank Pace attended the Chuckwagon Party at Ft. McNair, Va., given by the Corps of Engineers, a benefit for the Soldiers', Sailors', Marines' and Airmen's Club in Washington.

A barbecue with all the trimmings was served from "Chuckwagons," around campfires. Cowboys with guitars played western tunes. Practically everyone turned out in Western attire or blue jeans and calico, which made it a very gay, colorful affair.

Dancing took place in the "barn" (gymnasium). A spirited exhibition of square dancing was enjoyed as well as other attractions, including a raffle of beautiful gifts graciously donated by various Washington firms. These were collected by Mrs. Gordon Young and were raffled by Col. Wm. E. Potter with much fun and success. Brig. Gen. David Ogden auctioned off some wares at great profit to the benefit.

Lt. Col. Guy Maple, Maj. John Burk and Lieutenant Tololo had charge of over-all arrangements. Others who lent their assistance were: Mrs. Claude Chorpening, Mrs. Emil J. Peterson, Mrs. William E. Potter, Mrs. Robert Fleming, Mrs. Raymond Harvey and Mrs. Wright Hatt.

Many engineers and their ladies attended from Washington and vicinity. Among these were: Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, the Chief of Engineers, and Mrs. Pick; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Douglas Weart, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Stanley Scott, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Kenneth Nichols, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. James Newman, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Stewart Bragdon, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. George Nold, Col. and Mrs. Claude Chorpening, Col. and Mrs. Robert Lovett, Col. and Mrs. Gordon Textor, Col. and Mrs. Robert Fleming, Col. and Mrs. Frank Bowman, Col. and Mrs. Al Lieber and others.

Mrs. Douglas MacArthur was the guest of honor at the autumn tea of the GHQ Women's Club in Tokyo, 21 Sept. Mrs. MacArthur and Mrs. Edward M. Almond, wife of General MacArthur's Chief of Staff, received the two hundred members who were presented to them by Mrs. Robert H. Cole, the Club's president.

RCA Govt. Service Division

The RCA Service Company announced this week the establishment of a special Government Service Division to coordinate its expanding activities and expedite government agency requirements for technical personnel, and installation and servicing of all types and makes of electronic equipment.

Mr. P. B. Reed, a veteran of more than 20 years in the electronic equipment and servicing fields, was named to head the new division and in this capacity was appointed Vice President in charge of the Government Service Division, RCA Service Co.

The Government Service Division represents an expansion of the company's former Government Service Section which, for ten years, has been handling service activities for government agencies, according to Mr. C. M. Odorizzi, Vice President in charge of Service for the RCA Victor Division. Mr. Odorizzi disclosed that the new division will undertake an expansion program involving technical personnel and facilities to keep pace with increased requirements of the military services.

Included in the expansion program are the company's elaborate and centralized repair facilities and its Technical Publications Section. The former is a modern service shop, located at the home office, which is completely equipped with the latest test and repair equipment. Under the present emergency and expanding defense program it is providing contract service to the Armed Forces in an overall project to modernize World War II radio and electronic equipment. The Technical Publications Section is set up to prepare and print and provide the Armed Forces with classified technical manuals on the subject of electronics in general and on specific electronic equipment.

At the present time, he disclosed, the RCA Service Company has more technicians and engineers in the field on Government servicing than it had during the peak of World War II activities. The majority of these technicians are already overseas, assigned to Army Signal Corps, U. S. Air Force, and U. S. Navy posts in Europe, the South Pacific, and the Far East. Their duties include the installation and servicing of Radar, Sonar, radio communications, teletype, and other electronic equipment, and the training of military personnel in servicing procedures.

Mr. Reed, head of the new Division, has been with RCA since 1930, when he joined

INDUSTRY * FINANCE * MARITIME

Military Priority

A directive issued this week by the National Production Authority instructs industry to give military orders of the Department of Defense and the Atomic Energy Commission priority over all other production orders. It also gives contractors filling war orders priority on materials entering into such production.

While military orders are given precedence over civilian demands, it is believed that it will be considerable time before the effect of this directive is seriously felt by civilian consumers. Ultimately it may mean a decline in production of automobiles, refrigerators, radios and household appliances.

Military requirements added to heavy civilian demands may result in a steel shortage. However, Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer announced this week that the steel industry plans to increase productive capacity by 9.4 million tons by the end of 1952. This would make possible production at an annual rate of 100,963,000 tons, compared with 100,536,000 tons last year.

In apparent anticipation of a prospective shortage of many items and a consequent advance in prices the public has expanded its purchases to such an extent that in August consumer credit reached an all-time high of nearly $21 billion. Installment buying accounted for $13 billion of this total.

Controls on installment credit were reimposed by the Federal Reserve Board on 18 Sept., but preliminary reports indicate that these did not materially curb credit buying, except in the case of used cars. It is quite possible, therefore, that credit curbs may be further tightened.

the RCA Photophone Service Department as a field engineer. During the past war, when RCA established a Government Service Section, he was transferred to Government servicing and was assigned to the U. S. Navy for work on Sonar and Radar equipment. He spent 10 months with the Fourth Fleet in the South Atlantic, following which he was transferred to RCA's Washington office, handling Government contract negotiations and broadcast equipment sales.

Reopen Air Engine Plant

Pratt & Whitney Aircraft assumed formal cognizance over its former wartime plant at Southington, Conn. on 30 Sept., William P. Gwinn, general manager of P&WA announced. "Several months will be required to put the Southington plant back into production," Mr. Gwinn said.

Acquisition of the Southington plant is part of the expanded engine production program. Other steps included extension of East Hartford plant operations early in September to two full shifts plus a third "bottleneck" shift, all on a six-day, 48-hour week and licensing of the Ford Motor Company of Detroit to produce the 3,500 horsepower Wasp Major piston engine in a government-owned war surplus plant in Chicago.

MSTS Ships Busy

The Military Sea Transportation Service, which completed its first year of operation on 1 Oct., transported more than a million and a half tons of cargo and 200,000 passengers to the Far East in support of United Nations forces during a recent two months' period.

The statistics for the two months' period during hostilities in Korea are: 1,625,000 measurement tons of cargo were lifted a total of 7½ billion ton miles; 200,000 passengers transported for a total of three-fourths of a billion passenger-miles over 775,000 route miles; and 12½ million barrels of gasoline and other petroleum products lifted a total of 5½ billion ton miles.

Admiral Ramsey Discusses Aircraft Mfg. Problems

Today's partial military and industrial mobilization has created many special problems in the aircraft manufacturing industry which are likely to increase the cost of aircraft or seriously delay scheduled production, or both, according to Admiral DeWitt C. Ramsey, USN (Ret.), President of Aircraft Industries Assn.

This results in large part from the fact that most existing mobilization plans such as those developed by the Munitions Board, the National Security Resources Board and the industry itself, envision all-out, full-scale mobilization, Admiral Ramsey said in an article in AIA's official publication, "Planes."

Emphasizing the relatively limited magnitude of the defense program, he said that the peak rates of presently scheduled aircraft production will not be reached for nearly two years and then will be only about 1/15th of those attained in World War II.

Some of the major problems already encountered, he said, are difficulty in getting prompt delivery of aluminum, steel, machine tools and other critical components and parts; effects of wage increases and other factors which have rocketed the costs of a large number of components from 5% to as much as 40% since July 1; increasing competition with producers of civilian goods for skilled employees, most of whom are now seeking a "fifth round" of wage increases.

In addition, he said, many suppliers are unable to fill military orders for aircraft builders because of booming civilian demand, while on the other hand producers of commercial aircraft are often told military needs have absorbed the materials and components they need.

Solution of these problems is not in sight, he said, because obviously there has not been time to develop procedures tailored to fit the peculiar requirements of partial mobilization. "Whether the situation will become sufficiently serious to necessitate the imposition of mandatory priorities, and even a controlled materials plan, is something that cannot now be foreseen," he added. "Fortunately, the same management skills which so successfully met the aircraft production challenge of World War II are available to the country today."

Ordnance Day at Aberdeen

This week more than 4,000 members of the American Ordnance Association were given an opportunity to observe at firsthand some of the new types of Army ordnance developed since World War II.

A day long program of tests and demonstrations was held Thursday, 5 Oct., at the Aberdeen Proving Ground, Incident to the 32d Annual Meeting of the Association when leading executives and engineers from American industry assembled at the Proving Ground, as has been their custom for more than thirty years. According to Mr. James L. Walsh, President of the Association, visitors to Aberdeen were amazed at the great progress of the past five years in ordnance design and development. Similarly, according to Mr. Walsh, there were expressions on all sides on the part of industry representatives who were present of America's ability to produce the newer types as required.

The program began at 10:00 A.M. with greetings from Maj. Gen. E. L. Ford, Chief of Army Ordnance, and a welcome from Maj. Gen. E. E. MacMorland, Commanding General of the Proving Ground. The thanks of the Association were tendered by President Walsh. Throughout the morning demonstrations and tests of newer types of rockets, projectiles, machine guns, and artillery, the tremendous increases in firepower for the Armed services of our country—Army, Navy and Air—were apparent. At noontime a Maryland fried chicken luncheon was served to the more than 4,000 guests.

In the afternoon Army Ordnance revealed some of its latest achievements in combat vehicles, displaying progress in armor, speed, maneuverability and firepower. A major portion of the afternoon program was devoted to a tactical exercise on the main front at the Proving Ground when all the new weapons, including air support, were utilized in a simulated battle engagement using new methods of firepower to maximum extent.

Led by high officials of the Department of Defense and the leading officers of the Army, Navy and Air Force, members of the Association assembled from all parts of the United States. Six special trains were operated for the occasion: from New England, Philadelphia, Washington and Detroit. Two special trains were operated from New York City. In addition, members came by private aircraft to the number of more than 100 aircraft.

A special guest of honor throughout the day was Maj. Gen. C. C. Williams, USA-Ret., Chief of Ordnance 1918-1930. General Williams, in addition to his brilliant career as an administrator, was also a founding father of the Ordnance Association.

Officers of the Association who participated in the deliberations of the day and observed the program of tests are:
